[COMMUNICATED.

ASSOCIATION-BY J. B. JOHNSON. Virtue, like its opposite, Vice, is not peculiar to any class of society, but pervades its every branch; and whether found in the palace or in the hovel, it is the same meek expositor of the goodness of the human heart. and sends forth its modest light to direct the wandering step in the path of pleasantness and peace. There is no compatibility between the two. The vicious shun the vir- Mh. tuous, and can never be made to appreciate rightly that pity which the latter evince for them.

Interest and affection present many ties to bind mankind together, and cause them to become familiar with each other's acts and habits. Being susceptible of rapidly receiving good or bad suggestions, the mind is, to May 1 2 3 4 5 6 7 a greater or less extent, influenced by its surroundings; and how to associate intimately with the world without falling into some of Jun its snares and pits, should be the interest of all: for in order to make the best of the very dubious space of time which is apportioned to each one, we should constantly woo the Juy sunshine of virtue, and seek earnestly to evade even the shadow of those murky clouds of vice, which sweep like a terrible storm over the soul, and enshroud it in darkness and devastation. Therefore, great caution is of the utmost importance in selecting such persons as are to be the recipients of those feelings which one heart is ever ready to dean individual is often within the very grasp of it. Hence January Term.—Turner Dixon, P. J.; John Sumof vice before he is aware of it. Hence; "evil communications corrupt good morals;" and in our intercourse with the world we are placed in a condition in which we are to be morally benefited or injured. The society Smoot. of the virtuous is always pleasing, while that of the vicious is noxious and revolting, and an individual's resistance to its wiles is in proportion to the degree of moral training to Joseph C. Moore, Robert Brockett, and James A. sented to it. Under certain influences it becomes passive, and when freed from moral Brockett. restraint, soon loses its purity, and learns to regard with derison those powers before which virtuous spirits bow in reverence. It is, too, more rapidly debased than elevated, Richard M. Smith, George H. Smoot, and Wesley Richard M. Smith, George H. Smoot, and Wesley and when once the barriers which conscience offers to vice are broken over with impunity, the heart soon forgets its shame, and goes down, down, until the face of reformation is turned aghast, and the wretch dies in his infamy; and when those who once knew him, approach his body to look upon it for the last time, they hold their breath lest they may be corrupted by the foul air which seems to surround his inanimate form. Evil association creates bad thoughts, fosters vile intentions, and leads to lying, arson, larceny, drunkenness, adultery, blasphemy, murder, and self-destruction; and the first study of every parent should be not only to sway his children by the force of his own example, but to allow them to associate only with the good, the wise, and the virtuous; and to check at the very budding any habit which would lead them to mean conduct and grovelling dispositions: for the fire-side of home is the place where the seed of virtue most rapidly takes root, whence it spreads in after life, like the branches of a luxuriant tree. It is emphatically during infancy and childhood that the basis of the man of honorable feelings, or that of the rake of despicable ways is formed; and as soon as the intellectual powers begin to dawn, parental authority and wisdom should march unwaveringly with them until the young mind is thoroughly imbued with virtuous sentiments: for so surely as a parent neglects the impera-tive duty of watching and directing the mental growth of his child, so will he in nine of ten cases wish his child had never been born, or hope that the earth may open and swallow him; for just as the mind is inclined by culture, so it will lean, and never, as a rule, in after life depart from its bent. Habits formed during childhood and youth generally indicate the character of the future man, and constitute the sum of his honor or his dishonor, his happiness or his misery. How many youths whose names daily appear on the lists of violations of deceney, law and order, owe their degradation to the negligence of their parents in not directing their minds aright by timely counsel and punishment!-How many parents' cheeks now burn with the blush of chagrin as the voice of rumor bears to their ears the report of some dreadful act committed by one of their children .-Well do such parents deserve to blush, and the words, "I neglected the moral education of my children," should be written on the August and November brow of each, and go with them to their graves; for they who silently omit to punish evil acts and bad associations, morally murder their children, and are responsible for their departure from the way in which they should go. LIRESH SUPPLY.—We are now receiving from SOUTHERN PROTECTION IN SURAN. New York, and have in store the following GOODS, to which we invite the attention of the CAPITAL OVER $250.000. AND CONSTANTLY INCREASING.

The Charter of this Company offers more favor. ble advantages to the farmer and others, than an other Company chartered in the State, by insuring with or without a premium note. If the applicant prefer, he can pay the full amount of the premun in eash, or by effecting a cash insurance for the years, the insured saves one-eighth of the amount he would otherwise have to pay; or by becoming member, and giving a small premium note, the is sured saves nearly one-half of the amount charge by Stock Companies, when insuring from year year. This is the advantage resulting from ombination of THE CASH AND MUTTA PRINCIPLE.

This Company commenced issuing Pollat against loss or damage by fire, on the 16th of March, 1854, since which time over five theorems seven hundred persons have insured and becom-members of the Company, and over thirty than sand dollars have been paid for losses. Have, trebled our business during the past year, we be grateful for the liberal patronage bestowed a the Company thus far, and for its flattering ; pects of future usefulness. The Directors and believe, that, by prudence, caution, and a rig system of economy, they will establish for il Company a reputation for cheapness and safet not surpassed by any Company in the U. States. All differences in settlement of losses, may determined by three disinterested arbitrators of the County where such loss happened, to be mutual
